Dirigible Norge Is Safe at Teller, Alaska

Army Radio Operator at Nome Hears Signals From Missing Airship, Receives Message and Sends Response—Failure of Gasoline Supply Is Believed to Have Forced Her Landing Within A Hundred Miles of Goal.

The Amundsen-Ellsworth Polar Exploration Airship Norge is safe.

With the same dramatic suddenness that has marked previous sensational disappearances of Captain Roald Amundsen, head of the expedition, in the Arctic wastes, the news crackled forth today over the radio from Alaska that the Norge had been found by radio at Teller, Alaska.

To the army, which blankets the Alaskan wastes with its chain of radio stations, went the honor of picking up the first news of the missing dirigible.

An Army radio operator in the Signal Corps' radio station in Nome, Alaska, after three days of listening, heard the Norge's signals, received a message from it and sent a response which is believed to have reached the airship.

To the Navy, however, went the honors of getting the news out to the interested world first.

The big naval radio station at Cordova, where centers the wireless "nerves" of the United States Navy, heard the response of the Nome Army station to the Norge and sent out the flash:

"Nome is apparently in communication with the Norge."

Shortly thereafter an official message reached the Chief Signal Officer of the United States Army at Washington confirming the report.

Communication Established Friday.

It revealed that the Nome army radio operator had established communication first with the Norge at Teller, Alaska, at 1 p. m., May 14, Alaskan time.

The news of the safety and location of the Norge brought to an end 72 hours of anxiety.

Previous to picking up the Norge's signals at Teller nothing had been heard from the Norge since Wednesday night about 11 o'clock (Alaskan time) when the naval station at St. Paul, in the Pribiloff Group of Islands, picked up a messagee from the Norge to the effect that she was en route to Nome.

Gasoline May Have Failed.

There preparations for her arrival were practically completed, huge landing flares lighted, a crew of 120 men held in readiness to land the big airship, and an official welcome organized which promised to outdo anything in Nome's hectic career.

Then came a period of silence, reports of storms and gradually increasing fears for the Norge's safety.

Failure of the Norge's gasoline supply within less than a hundred miles of the dirigible's goal is believed to have forced her landing at Teller although this has not been officially confirmed.

Eleven p. m. Alaska time is 4 a. m. eastern standard time.

There was considerable relief here over establishment of radio contact with the airship.

"That's fine, it's bully," said General John J. Pershing.

Army's Statement.

Washington, May 15.—Radio communication with the Airship Norge over Teller, Alaska, was established at 11 p. m. on May 14, yesterday, the chief signal officer of the army announced today.

The army issued the following statement:

"Office of the chief signal officer of the army is in receipt of a message from Nome, Alaska, to the effect that the Norge is at Teller, Alaska, about 74 miles northeast of Nome. Communication between the Norge and Nome was established at 11 p. m., May 14, Alaska time.

"No further details were messaged to the War Department.

"The department declared that all its radio messages bearing on the Norge would be available at the Seattle station, the Army's transmission terminus from Alaska.

The two convicts, in prison gray were seen here by the conductor in a drug store. They arranged for a bus ride to Worcester but when the bus driver left the car to telephone the men fled in the woods.

Narrow Escapes In Train Crash

Warning Torpedoes Placed Too Near Stalled Freight Train Fails to Stop Passenger Train In Heavy Fog.

Norwood, Mass., May 15.—Twenty passengers were shaken up and two train crews narrowly escaped with their lives today, when a Hartford, Connecticut, to Boston passenger train plowed into the rear of a stalled freight train at Ellis Station at Westwood.

The caboose was telescoped by the passenger train locomotive, three freight cars were derailed and two of them dropped down an embankment. The wreckage caught fire, but the Westwod fire department prevented the spread of the blaze.

A heavy fog which swept up from the Charles river obstructed the view of the engineer of the passenger train locomotive and the train crew of that train reported that the warning torpedoes had been placed too near the stalled freight train.

The passenger train consisted of two sleepers, two coaches, and a mail and baggage car. It was running as a local into Boston.

The passengers were tossed about in the sleeping cars and coaches, one man, whose name was not learned was shaving and was slightly cut.

A trainman in the caboose had a narrow escape from death when he felt the crash of the locomotive as it ploughed into the rear of the freight train. The man leaped for his life and escaped.

None of the passengers was injured and all were carried to Boston by motor bus.

With the exception of the locomotive and tender, the cars of the passenger train kept to the rails.

One of the three freight cars derailed was loaded with shoes and the scene was strewn with footwear.

Traffic was tied up for some time as the rails were ripped up for a distance of some twenty yards.

Prompt response by the Westfire department prevented a serious fire as the wreckage was in flames immediately after the crash.

The passenger train locomotive was imbedded in the wreckage of the caboose.

The passenger train crew was made up of Engineer J. H. Bodwell, Fireman W. J. Hughes and Conductor C. Saulter.

E. P. Brooks was conductor of the freight train and Walter Hubbard the engineer.

Bodwell and Hughes had narrow escapes from death but stuck to their posts in the crash. Bodwell having set all emergency brakes.

Judge Parker Makes Valuable Gift to Kingston

Valuable Historical Collection Given to City With $10,000 to Build Fire Proof Room to House Them—Pays Tribute to Wife and Daughter in Will.

JUDGE ALTON B. PARKER.

The gift of the historical objects in the "Governors' Room" of his library building at Rosemont, Esopus, provided Mrs. Parker approves and the gift is accepted and cared for is made to the people of Kingston by Judge Alton B. Parker in his will, which has been filed for probate in the Ulster county surrogate's court, together with the sum of not to exceed $10,000 for the construction of a fire proof room in which to house them, provided the gift is accepted by the city.

It was over the Ulster county surrogate's court where his will is now filed for probate, that Judge Parker first presided at the beginning of his long and distinguished judicial career.

A portrait of Judge Parker by Mueller Ury is given to the Ulster County Bar Association.

The contents of the "Governors' Room" which are thus provisionally given to the city of Kingston were collected by Judge Parker during many years of his life. They include among other things a framed photograph or steel engraving of each of the governors of the state of New York, and with a single exception there is framed beneath each picture a letter or public document with the governor's autograph; a collection of pictures and autographs of Colonial governors is being acquired by Mrs. Parker.

Among the other contents of the "Governors' Room" is the famous Cleveland bedstead and dresser which were made by the state especially for Grover Cleveland's use when he was governor. The bedstead and dresser came into the possession of ex-Governor David B. Hill, who prized them highly and who by his will bequeathed them to Judge Parker. President Cleveland, it will be recalled, was of tremendous size and weight, and it was necessary to construct an especially large and strong bedstead for him, the workmanship on which is of unusual character.

The bulk of the estate is left by Judge Parker to his wife, Amelia Day Campbell, whom he married three years ago six years after the death of his first wife, Mary Louise Schoonmaker Parker, and to his daughter Bertha Parker Hall, wife of the Rev. Charles Mercer Hall of Bridgeport, Conn. The will shows that Judge Parker had transferred his country place at Esopus to his daughter before he thought of remarriage.

Text of the Will.

The text of the will follows:

I, Alton B. Parker, of Esopus, Ulster county, N. Y., do hereby make publish and declare this to be my last will and testament.

First—Years before I contemplated remarriage I invested my house in the Hudson river to my daughter Bertha Parker Hall. Now by this will I give her in addition the spray and machines and all tools except tractors and cars other than the Buick together with all farming tools implements utensils and machines, and all farm horses and other farm stock.

Second—Last year my daughter conveyed to me and I conveyed to my wife, Amelia Day Campbell Parker, the Tillotson Parker homestead formerly known in the hamlet as the library building and some adjoining acres together with a deed to the water front and made under water.

In that building is the Governors' room which contains among other interesting things a framed photograph or steel engraving of each of the governors of New York state. With a single exception there is framed beneath each picture a letter or public document with the governor's autograph and a collection of pictures and autographs of Colonial governors is being acquired by Mrs. Parker.

John Herring Dies At City Hospital

Prominent Resident of Ulster Park Fails to Survive Injuries Received on the Strand on April 15.

John Herring, a well known and prominent fruit grower of Ulster Park, died this morning at the Kingston City Hospital of injuries received on the Strand on Thursday afternoon, April 15, of this year.

At the time he was injured he was standing in the rear of his Ford truck on the Strand busy unloading some fruit when the Dodge truck of Besher Fadoul, parked in front of Fadoul's store on the Strand, backed into the Ford truck, knocking Mr. Herring down and injuring him.

According to the police report of the accident the Fadoul truck was parked in front of Fadoul's store. Directly behind it was parked the Ford truck, and behind the Ford truck was parked the Jewett car of Albert Salem of 35 Sycamore street.

Mrs. Mina Manos came out of Fadoul's store and got into the Fadoul truck. She said she only sat into the truck to sit awhile, but the truck started backing until it crashed into the Herring truck knocking Mr. Herring down and fracturing his right leg so badly that the bone protruded through the flesh. The Fadoul truck after striking the Herring truck then swerved back toward the gutter and crashed into the Jewett car which was parked behind the Ford truck.

Following the collision Mr. Herring was rushed to the hospital and Mrs. Manos placed under arrest on a charge of reckless driving but the hearing had been adjourned pending the outcome of Mr. Herring's injuries.

Mr. Herring had been a resident of Ulster Park for a number of years and had a large fruit farm there. He was a member of Ulster Grange, No. 969, and was superintendent of the Union Center Sunday school. He was a leader in the civic and religious life of that community and was a man who was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

He is survived by his wife, one son Roy; a brother, Leslie Herring of Ulster Park, and one sister, Anna, wife of Chester Wells of Union Center. The funeral will take place from his late residence at Ulster Park on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock daylight saving time, with interment at St. Remy.

Coolidge Talks Of State's Rights

Williamsburg, Va., May 15.—President Coolidge came here today and expounded, in one of America's oldest halls of higher learning, the basic principle of state's rights. At the same time he took occasion to condemn roundly the growing tendency toward "minority rule," and the establishment of bureaucracies.

Listening attentively were the thirteen governors of the states which once comprised the original colonies. The president pleaded a return to those principles upon which the nation was founded 150 years ago.

The occasion was the sesquicentennial of the adoption by the Virginia Assembly, meeting here at William and Mary College, of a resolution directing that state's delegation to the Continental Congress to support a Declaration of Independence and Mr. Coolidge urged the forty-eight states forming the union today not to lose sight of the fundamentals for which [illegible] the memorable occasion.

Before his speech the governors were given a LL. D. degree by William and Mary College. He wore the traditional cap and gown, and was given an ovation by the student body.

Pilsudski Now In Control of Polish Capital

Retirement of President and Premier Leaves Pilsudski In Complete Control—Expect Clash Momentarily Outside Gates of Warsaw.

Warsaw, May 15. — President Wojciechowski and Premier Witos resigned their offices today. They announced their resignation after negotiations with Marshal Pilsudski, leader of the insurrectionist coup.

The retirement of the president and the premier leaves Pilsudski, virtually in complete control, with Poland's only government that which he established shortly after his triumphal entry into the capital.

With Pilsudski troops encamped in Warsaw the capital was calm during the early hours of the morning, although there were reports that government troops are concentrating for a march upon the city.

Marshal Pilsudski is received with great acclaim whenever he appears in public.

Rumors of a Lithuanian invasion of Vilna have been received here but are denied.

Clash Expected.

Berlin, May 15.—A clash between government and insurrectionary armies was awaited momentarily outside the gates of Warsaw, capital of Poland, this morning according to dispatches received here.

Twenty thousand soldiers are involved, all equipped with modern rifles and supported by light and heavy artillery, machine gun companies and aircraft and several preliminary skirmishes have already taken place, the dispatches stated.

Warsaw was calm, but it was the deceptive calm which precedes a storm.

Marshal Pilsudski, leader of the insurrectionary army, is personally in charge of the troops. The Government Army is led by General Haller, the rebel chief's "Bitterest enemy".

Battalions of reinforcements for both sides were moving overland by foot and by rail. Two infantry regiments from Vilna, native city of Pilsudski, were reported enroute.

51 Dead, 242 Wounded.

What is believed to be a communique from the insurrectionary forces received here this morning places the casualties in the two days fighting in Warsaw at 51 dead, 242 wounded.

The communique stated that the desire of Pilsudski was aimed solely at the overthrow of the Witos cabinet rather than at the Polish President. The communique adds that "The president and members of the Witos Government left Belvedere Palace before its capture by Pilsudski".

Pilsudski's Victory Confirmed.

London, May 15.—The victory of Marshal Pilsudski, leader of the Polish insurrection, over the Witos Government has been officially confirmed, according to a Central News Dispatch from Vienna today.

Pilsudski in his first official communique said that he had no intention of establishing a military dictatorship. He was determined however to put an end to the present mismanagement of the affairs of state, and would form an efficient non-partisan government the communique added.

Members of the Witos government who have remained in Warsaw have been arrested and interned for the duration of hostilities.

Estimates of casualties suffered in the fighting in the Polish capital vary, the highest figure being 154 killed, the Daily News correspondent at Vienna said this morning.

During the attack by Pilsudski on the presidential palace 25 were killed and 85 wounded.

General Sotkowski lifelong friend of Pilsudski who himself to avail when the garrison at Posen, in defiance of his orders joined the government's movement of troops to Warsaw.

Sixteen Off for Warsaw.

Paris, May 15.—John E. Stetson American ambassador to Poland left here by airplane for Warsaw today. The envoy cut short his vacation fearing that the lives and property of American citizens may be endangered in the fighting between the Polish factions.

Downing Vaux Killed in Fall from Y.M.C.A. Roof

Body of Well Known Landscape Architect Found, Clad in Night Clothes, on Sidewalk on Pine Grove Avenue—Vaux Laid Out Kingston Point Park and Riverside Drive in New York—Had Roomed at "Y" for Number of Years.

Downing Vaux, widely known landscape architect who laid out Kingston Point Park and Riverside Drive in New York city, was instantly killed in a fall from the roof of the Y. M. C. A. building early this morning. His body, clad in his night clothes was found on the sidewalk on Pine Grove avenue, near the entrance to the Auditorium Theatre. Practically every bone in his body had been broken in the fall.

Mr. Vaux had been mentally unsettled for several days past but no one realized that his condition was as bad as it was. The body was turned over to Stock & Cordts after Coroner W. Norman Conner had completed his investigation.

Mr. Vaux had been a resident of Kingston for a number of years and had desk room in the McEntee insurance agency on Ferry street. During the years he resided here he lodged at the Y. M. C. A. where he had been a roomer for many years.

It is thought that some time in the early morning he arose from his bed and got onto the roof of the building. The roof is protected by a coping several feet in height and it is believed that he climbed up on the coping and then suddenly jumped or fell.

When the body was first found the police department was notified and the ambulance rushed to the scene. Dr. John P. Larkin, police surgeon, was also notified and examined the body. Coroner W. Norman Conner was notified of the finding of the body by the police and immediately took charge of the case.

Mr. Vaux for many years was prominent as a landscape architect. He was a son of Calvert Vaux, who laid out Central Park in New York city. The dead man also became famous in the same line of work and laid out Riverside Drive in New York city. He also laid out Kingston Point Park and was the architect in charge of the work of landscaping the Ramsdell estate at Newburgh, and also Downing Park in Newburgh.

He is survived by his wife, who made here home in New York, and a brother, C. Boyer Vaux, of Philadelphia. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The Auxiliary voted to purchase oil cloth scarfs for the chiffoniere and to buy and make denim laundry bags for the dormitories. The members made a tour of inspection of the dormitories, finding them very clean and orderly.

The Auxiliary voted to pay for the repairing and painting of the walls of the entrance hall of the Y. M. C. A. building, also the two large rooms at either side of the hall.

As the June meeting is to be held at the summer camp of the president, Mrs. Longyear, at Shokan, with a delegation from both the Poughkeepsie and Newburgh Auxiliaries as guests, it was voted to charter busses for the trip and Mrs. W. BRUSH TURKEYS AGAIN

"Please, I beg of you, don't ask me about Mr. Thanksgiving Turkey again," said Mr. Brush Turkey.

"I have no intention of asking you about him," said Mrs. Brush Turkey.

"What put him in your mind?"

"He's not in my mind," said Mr. Brush Turkey, in a very loud voice.

"He's not in my mind at all. My brains are in my mind—at least I suppose they are.

"I've never looked thoroughly so as to find out for certain, but I'm pretty sure of it just the same.

"A creature can know where things are without going to find out for certain every time.

"But I do know perfectly well, at any rate, that I haven't Mr. Thanksgiving Turkey in my mind.

"With such a load upon me I'd be aware of it.

"Oh yes, certainly one could never have a turkey in one's mind without knowing it.

"The weight would be too great for that, especially a fattened up Thanksgiving Turkey.

"It may not be time for a fattened up Thanksgiving Turkey as yet, but any kind would be enough of a load so that a creature would know if he was in his head."

"Cluck, cluck, gobble," said Mrs. Brush Turkey. "How very foolish you are.

"Of course I don't mean that Mr. Thanksgiving Turkey is sitting up in your head as though it were his best library or smoking den, but I meant that you were thinking about him.

"When people think about anything or any person, they say that thing or person is on their mind, or in their mind."

"I'll have you know," said Mr. Brush Turkey, in a very haughty voice, "that I am not a person.

"I wouldn't be a person.

"Not for anything!

"A person has to dress up in boots and stockings and skirts and waists, and dresses, and suits and overcoats, and gloves, and hats.

"At least one person doesn't have to wear all those clothes, but some of them anyway.

"And lots of people have to wear lots of clothes. The more people there

Fattened-Up Thanksgiving Turkey

are wearing clothes, the more clothes there are being worn.

"No, I wouldn't be a person. Not for a moment."

"I don't believe you could be one if you tried, not even for a second," said Mrs. Brush Turkey.

"No matter," said Mr. Brush Turkey. "But the reason I was thinking about Mr. Thanksgiving Turkey was because I heard some children say they liked the Thanksgiving Turkey better than any Brush Turkey when the keeper told them about us.

"And really, it does annoy me!

"To think how Mr. Thanksgiving Turkey can be flattered by such talk! Yes, he struts around and is pleased—and what does such talk mean?

"Nothing, but that people want to eat him. They like to eat him, ha, ha, that's flattery for you! But not the kind I like.

"And so I said you need not talk to me about him. Maybe you weren't going to talk to me about him, but I thought I'd make sure of it by telling you my wishes on the subject."

"I'm busy now," said Mrs. Brush Turkey, "so I can't talk about anything."

She immediately began building a big mound and then laid her eggs upon it.

In a little while she gathered sticks and dirt and dried grass and threw it on top of the eggs.

Then she left the eggs to hatch themselves by the aid of the sun, and she didn't even help the little chicks come out from the dirt.

They had to look after themselves and get out as best they could, but once they were out they could fly.

"I don't believe in spoiling children either in my home in Australia or when I am in the zoo," she said.

Nothing New to Him

The lady reformer was at her best. "—and on the subject of female dress reform it is not too much to hope that the woman of the next generation will have pockets to put her hands in." The little gentleman in the frayed cuffs turned away sadly. "My wife has enjoyed the privilege for the last 20 years," he murmured.

Spending of Coins

Most Americans look upon the silver dollar as the most cumbersome coin ever minted. But it is put completely in the shade by some of the old Swedish pieces. In the museum at Falun, in Sweden, there is a copper coin dated 1644 which measures 23 inches by 20 and weighs over forty pounds.

A Leading Question

A department storekeeper has figured out a foolproof approach. He stopped a hurrying man with this question. "Sorry, can you give my name information?" "I'll try," was the answer. "What do you want to know?" "What I want to know, boss, is where can I get a quarter?"—Detroit News.

In the Spotlight!

Each year, some one appealing motor car creation emerges from the throng of commonplace cars and wins country-wide preference.

This year, it is the dashing new Oakland Six sport roadster that occupies the spotlight. In every city and town in America, roadster enthusiasts are according the car an unaccepted welcome.

They admire the beauty of its long, low, racy Fisher Body. They comment upon its distinctive color scheme in two-tone Duco—Mouse Royal Blue and El Paso Tan. They speak enthusiastically of its speed, acceleration, power and the unmatched smoothness imparted by the Harmonic Balancer. And they marvel that a roadster so fine can be offered at such a low price.

With the advent of Spring, the demand has become insistent. Ordinary wisdom suggests that you place your order now.

Miners Consider Baldwin's Plans

Conference Adjourns Until Thursday to Consider Premier's Peace Proposals—Die-Hards Yielding to More Moderate Elements.

London, May 15.—The Miners' Federation is apparently in no hurry to end the coal strike.

A delegate conference of miners today considered Premier Baldwin's peace proposals and adjourned until Thursday to consider these proposals.

The Baldwin proposals were reported to have been received by the conference with only moderate enthusiasm.

Prior to adjournment the conference passed a resolution of thanks to the workers in other trades who had joined them on strike and promised them aid if they met difficulties as the result of the general strike. The resolution adopted was as follows:

"This conference expresses its profound appreciation of the self sacrificing loyalty displayed by our fellow trade unionists and pledges itself to render aid to any organization which at the termination of the stoppage is confronted with difficulties arising from the strike.

Acceptance of the new terms will entail a slight reduction of the wages of higher paid workmen but the government's new $15,000,000 subsidy will ensure the maintenance of the general wage level while reorganization of the coal industry is undertaken.

Premier Baldwin left for Chequers this morning for a much needed week-end vacation.

Negotiations were also under way to bring to an end the strike of dock workers and other transportation labor who still remain idle, while volunteers maintain operation on the wharves of London and other British ports.

Many manufacturing plants, closed down two weeks ago either because of the strikes or for lack of coal, will be unable to get under way again before next week.

It was apparent today that the die-hards in both sides of the now-terminated industrial conflict have given way to the more moderate elements seeking to quit recrimination and achieve real peace. Notwithstanding these endeavors, the bitterness left by the strike is not likely to vanish immediately.

Many dock workers dissatisfied with the abrupt ending of the strike, are unwilling to return to work, especially in view of the prevalent feeling that the terms imposed by the railroad companies will form a precedent for other settlements in the transportation industry.

What the Fairy Told Three Married Women

Three women once went to the Marriage Fairy. The first woman said: "My husband is not very charming or entertaining, but he is proud of my beauty, and sends me abroad in furs and satins and jewels. How long will it last?" And the fairy answered: "It will last till the next panic in Wall Street, when your husband will lose his money and put a bullet through his head."

And the second woman said: "I do not care for wealth or luxury if I can be adored. And I am. I have been married fifteen years, and my husband still thinks me the loveliest woman on earth. How long will it last?" And the fairy answered: "You have already had it longer than nearly all the mentioned women. It will last for another twelve months longer, and then one day quite suddenly you will never know why."

And the third woman said: "I don't seem to need what most women need. I love you, and I never had a really beautiful dress in my life. But I don't care. My husband never pays me a great deal of attention. I don't remember that he ever complimented me in his life. I sit with him in the evening after my work is done. And if by chance he meets my eyes and smiles, I am perfectly happy. How long will it last?" And the fairy answered: "It will last till the day of your golden wedding, and then longer still. Do you really want it forever?"—Kansas City Times.

Women in U. S. Treasury

The assistant treasurer of the United States informs us that in the spring of 1862 Mr. F. E. Spinner, treasurer of the United States, prevailed upon Secretary Chase to permit him to appoint a woman to cut and trim United States currency. This work was then done with shears in the hands of men. He appointed Miss Jessie Douglas and as he afterward expressed it, "her first day's work settled the matter in her and in women's favor." On October 2, 1862, the following women employees were appointed: Miss Fannie L. Halstead, Miss Annie York, Miss Belle S. Tracy, Miss Elizabeth Draper and Miss Mary Bruce. These women were the first for whom commissions regularly made out appointments.

Judge Parker's Gift to Kingston torical books. All the contents of the "Governors' room" I naturally give to my wife, Amelia Day Campbell Parker.

I also give to my wife, Amelia Day Campbell Parker, all other personal property of every kind in the "Library Building," only requesting that she will turn over all my personal letters, scrapbooks and autographed books in that building or my home to my descendants, at her convenience, or through her last will and testament.

I suggest, and if Mrs Parker approves, and the good people of Kingston will accept and care for the gift, I direct that all the historical objects in this "Governors' room" be presented to the people of Kingston as a gift from Mrs Parker and myself.

And I hereby authorize my executor, in the event of acceptance, to build a fireproof room to house them, at a place selected by the city authorities, and at a cost of not to exceed $10,000, which shall with the historical objects be then consigned to the care of the city or to such authority as it designates. Perhaps the Senate House grounds will be available for this purpose.

Third—My oil portrait by Mueller I give to the bench and bar of Kingston, making the bequest specifically to the Ulster County Bar Association.

Witnesses Gladys M. Fraser residing at 317 West Forty-fifth street, New York city; George Rose residing at 1517 Hone Avenue Bronx New York city.

The country place, Rosemont consisting of 187 acres, was all conveyed to the daughter with the exception of a small portion deeded to her mother. The transfer of this property before Judge Parker's death "colored his realty holdings largely but it was said Friday by Mr McCausland that he owned considerable property in Florida, which the executor will have appraised at once for the purpose of an immediate sale if it may appear advisable. Judge Parker's partner said he has not been informed as to the value of the personal estate.

Deep Rose Flowers Are Winsome in Blue Crepe

A dainty motion picture actress posed for this picture. She wears a simple frock of flat blue crepe printed with deep rose flowers. The collar and cuffs are of white crepe de chine and the dress is trimmed with grosgrain ribbon.

Coat Frock Survives Longer Than Others

No model has survived a longer period of popularity without in any way sacrificing the essential quality of chic than the dress modeled on the lines of a coat. Its adaptability to materials widely different in character has had much to do with its success.

Fashioned of woolen or heavy silk fabrics, it appears among the smartest street costumes; carried out in crepes, both plain or printed, it has its place in afternoon modes; developed in chiffons georgettes and metal brocades, or even lace, it is singularly appropriate for evening wear.

For the more mature woman a frock on these lines is an ideal choice. It gives the slim effect so much to be desired and there is no break at the waistline to cut the figure in two.

Shirrings play a part of distinct importance in the fashions of spring and often supply the only note of decoration.

Glitter of Crystal or Bright Gleam of Metal

Each season one hears that beaded frocks from a fashion point of view are nonexistent. And each season they appear in new and more interesting versions and take their places in the important modes of the moment. It goes without saying, however, that the crude and rather garish effects which characterized the beaded frock that had such a vogue a few seasons ago is absent. One now finds delicate and intricate designs worked out in subtle colorings accented here and there with a gleam of metal or the glitter of crystal.

A feature much emphasized by those who review the important collections of new spring models introduced within the past few weeks is the tendency to stress a mood the lines of the frock in a manner no unlike that of the princess frock. It is only a suggestion, however and all the more effective for its unobtrusiveness.

Two-Piece Jumpers Are Seasonable Favorites

Each week brings further proof that the ingenuity and cleverness of designers in creating new versions of the popular two-piece jumper frock have not been exhausted. So generally becoming are these costumes and so practical and smart that it will probably be some time before they pass out of the fashion picture.

Among the latest models to be brought out are those fashioned of shantung or tajah silks. They are on an equality in popularity with Chinese damask and crepe in such a wide range of colors that they are adapted both to street frocks and to the colorful models designed for sports and country wear.

Taffeta also has found its way into the realm of the jumper dress and is used for several of the most attractive models shown this season.

Tailored Mode Leads in Clothes for Spring

The tailored mode, not only in the usual acceptance of the phrase as applied to suits and street frocks but in afternoon costumes as well, may with truth be said to dominate the fashions of spring.

Not for many seasons has the simple tailored of blue serge or black and white checked wool been in such favor as it is this year. Cut on the pattern lines, yet together with meticulous tailoring, and with certain individual touches to give it character, this is the silhouette which the best-dressed women wear during the morning hours of shopping and for luncheon.

Dr. Hasbrouck Died on Friday

Well Known Physician Taken Suddenly Ill Monday Evening With Uremia and Never Recovered Consciousness—Funeral Services on Monday.

Dr. Walter DuBois Hasbrouck died about 6 o'clock Friday evening at the Kingston City Hospital of uremia. He had gone on a fishing trip on Monday and that evening retired to bed at an early hour. Tuesday morning he was found unconscious in his bed and his wife summoned Dr. Frank A. Johnston who advised that he be removed to the hospital. Dr. Hasbrouck never recovered consciousness.

Dr. Hasbrouck is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mary Jane, wife of George A. Wiggan of Germantown a suburb of Philadelphia, and Miss Margaret B. Hasbrouck at home, and two brothers, Judge G. De L. Hasbrouck of this city and Dr. John M. Hasbrouck of Haverstraw.

Dr. Hasbrouck was of Huguenot ancestry, being a lineal descendant of Jan Hasbrouck, who in 1660, in order to escape religious persecution, fled from Calais, France, to America. He settled in Ulster county, where he was made one of the patentees of New Paltz. The Hasbrouck family has long been known as one of the most prominent families in Ulster county.

Dr. Hasbrouck had been engaged in the practice of medicine in Kingston for many years and for a number of years he held the position of city physician for the western department of the city. He was a man of genial personality and made friends easily. Fraternally he was a member of Rondout Lodge, No. 340, F. & A. M. where he was raised a Master Mason in 1918.

Funeral services will be held from the late residence, No. 65 O'Neil street, Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, with interment in the Port Ewen cemetery. Friends wishing to view the remains may do so Sunday afternoon at the late home from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Peter and Paul

The old expression, "robbing Peter to pay Paul" is said to date back to about 1560. At that time many of the lands belonging to the cathedral of St. Peter at Westminster were appropriated to repair St. Paul's cathedral. Hence the expression to rob Peter to pay Paul."—Pathfinder Magazine.

YOUTH'S CRAVING FOR "KICK."

Not so long ago the slang adaptation of the word "kick" was employed only with reference to the exhilarating effect of spirituous beverages; now a "kick" is found in any unusual experience that pleasureably thrills or excites. Both observation and report indicate that young America now devotes most of its leisure to the pursuit and enjoyment of "kicks"—a pursuit leading into strange paths and too often into questionable acts, for ordinary pleasures and amusements soon stale in this restless age and anything to vary the monotony of regular routine is welcomed. It will be recalled that Leopold and Loeb, the youthful Chicago murderers, virtually confessed that they went so far as to kill young Franks merely for the sake of the "kick" to be found in the new and exciting experience.

Girls as well as boys are hot-footed on the trail of every possible "kick," too often repudiating on their way the manners of modest maidenhood. In a "mash-note" written to a popular young author recently a girl of good family admitted that she was doing wrong, but exultingly declared that she was "getting a terrible kick out of it." The story of a modern flapper just published by an observant woman includes among the "kicks" eagerly sought strong liquor, petting parties, roadsters, road-houses and "all the other milestones on the path to perdition," yet according to the reviewer of the book the reckless flapper "maintains a tempestuous virginity, at least up to the end of the finish chapter." But obviously there is no telling what may have happened later on. A pity that the girl or boy who courts danger and flirts with temptation in order to "get a kick out of it" forgets that she or he deliberately invites consequences than can never be wholly undone.

THE MONARCH OF LETTERS.

A leading photogravure picture section of May 9 shows a street in Stratford-on-Avon with "the flags of all nations" unfurled in honor of Shakespeare's birthday, even the Soviet flag of Rusia, in spite of protest, taking its place with the standards of "all the countries of the earth." What other man, whether military conqueror, far-famed statesman, or crowned king, has ever been so honored more than three centuries after the active or productive period of his life? One is reminded of the saying, attributed to Cardinal Richelieu, that the pen is mightier than the sword—which was and remains true at least of Shakespeare's pen. The imposing spectacle at Stratford has perhaps not been thought worthy of notice by the literary faddists of today who decry all standard work of the past and intimate that there was never any genuine literary achievement until now.

Even the destruction by fire of the Shakespeare Theatre at Stratford has led to an international movement to build and endow a great playhouse at Shakespeare's birthplace. Supplementing the English committee an American committee has been formed, and it is proposed to collect funds toward a construction cost of half a million dollars and an endowment fund of $750,000. It is desired not only to erect a lasting memorial but to provide for Shakespearean revivals of the first quality. No great difficulty in raising the money is expected. A small contribution from every lover of Shakespeare in the English-speaking world alone would more than suffice.

Mrs. Florence Kahn of California chose reapportionment as the subject of her first speech in Congress, pointedly arguing that the House should not remain districted on the basis of 1910, at which time our rural population was 54 per cent of the whole, by the census of 1920 was shown to be only 49 per cent, and is now unquestionably even less than that. As everybody knows, until this shift was voted reapportionment followed every decennial census.

St. John Irvine, the Irish playwright, criticizes the Prince of Wales for saying "horsy" when he means "horse." To the American ear, the average Englishman does even funnier things than that. And, of course, to the English ear, "the American twang"—whatever that may be—is more than amusing. In this connection much depends on what one is accustomed to hearing.

A Chicago Judge has warned the Grand Jury that the city is threatened with a reign of terror. Actual beginning rather than threat is suggested when gangsters operate a machine gun from a motor car against officers of the law with fatal results.

A NEW LIGHT ON TUBERCULOSIS.

One of the questions still asked by the insurance examiner, and on the printed application blank, is this "Is there any history of tuberculosis in your family?"

Where there is a history of tuberculosis in parents, or aunts and uncles, the applicant is sometimes asked to wait a little while, or perhaps a certain penalty is attached to his policy, which is gradually removed as the years pass.

However, in a British journal devoted entirely to tuberculosis, the results of an investigation into the family history of tuberculous patients is recorded.

This physician investigated 1,000 straight cases of tuberculosis, there being no special cases whatever.

His findings are remarkable. In the entire 1,000 cases there were only 154 cases that gave any family history whatever.

This is certainly different to what most of us have been taught, as the first thought in our minds when we consider a tuberculous patient, is that tuberculosis is in the family.

In these 154 cases he found that most of them gave a history that either mother or father had tuberculosis. An interesting point was that in the treatment of these cases, those where the mother was tuberculous made better progress toward recovery than those whose fathers had tuberculosis.

What are the lessons to us from this investigation?

The first is that while tuberculosis may not be hereditary, the very things in the make up of the parents, that enabled tuberculosis to lay hold of them, may be handed down to the children.

This may be a poor appetite, a tendency toward underweight, lack of fresh air and sunshine, exposure, not enough rest, and so forth. The second thought is this. Our leading experts on this ailment tell us that everybody has tuberculosis within them. That if everybody was carefully examined after death, some evidence of tuberculosis could be found.

Why then do only the few die from tuberculosis?

Because the natural resistance of the body in most people is able to fight off the attacks.

This means then that the majority of people, even if not watchful of their health, are able to avoid tuberculosis.

It means further that those who have the family history and others who are underweight, can likewise keep free from it by careful living. This living is good nourishing food, plenty of the fresh air and sunshine, perfect rest, and light daily exercise.

British Squadron Attacked Pulteneyville and Got Only Spoiled Flour, May 15, 1814.

In the spring of 1814, the government of Great Britain, which, as far as it had exerted itself in the war at all, had made it hitherto a defensive war, was in a position to pursue an aggressive policy, its armies being no longer required, since the abdication of Napoleon, for operations on the Continent. Detachments of veteran troops were sent to America, and invasions were planned from Canada and at points on the seaboard.

Late in the spring, Sir James L. Yeo, with a large British squadron, descended upon Oswego, captured Fort Ontario, May 6, and the stores and provisions that were contained in it.

On the evening of Saturday, May 15, this same British squadron was discovered making toward Pulteneyville, in present Wayne County, when the information was immediately expressed to General Joseph G. Swift, who happened to be in that vicinity.

General Swift rushed forward 130 volunteers and militia during the night. Early Sunday morning Yeo sent a flag on shore demanding the peaceable surrender of all public property, and threatening an immediate destruction of the village which is on the shore of the lake, in case of refusal.

General Swift returned for answer that he would oppose any attempt to land by all the means in his power.

Soon after the return of the flag, General Swift was induced, by the pressing solicitations and entreaties of the inhabitants of the town, to permit one of the citizens to go to the enemy with a flag, and offer to surrender up the property contained in a store-house at the water's edge, consisting of about one hundred barrels of badly damaged flour, on condition that the commanding officer would promise not to take any other, nor molest the inhabitants.

Before the return of the flag, the enemy had sent their boats with several hundred troops on shore, who took possession of the flour in the store and were proceeding to commit further depredations.

General Swift's forces were too inferior to justify an open attack, which, if attempted, would certainly have exposed his little command to the gun's of Yeo's entire fleet. He chose his ground in an adjacent wood, where he commenced a hot fire upon the invaders in which several were wounded.

The fight became so harassing that the troops were obliged to re-embark, whence they commenced a cannonade from the fleet upon the village. This fire was continued for sometime but with no other damage than a few shot-holes through the houses.

Three hundred barrels of good flour had been removed back from the store-house a few days before, leaving the damaged flour, which was the only booty obtained by the enemy. The British lost two killed and three wounded.

Sir James was apprized by some prisoners that a large quantity of good flour was deposited about a mile back of the town, but he wisely determined to forego the plunder of it, rather than again risk themselves in the woods with General Swift and his riflemen.

General Swift was the first graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, October 18, 1802. He arose from grade to grade until he was colonel and principal engineer, July 31, 1812. He planned the defense of New York harbor in 1812, and was chief engineer on the northern frontier in 1813. He was breveted brigadier general February 19, 1814, for meritorious services, and in 1816 was made superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, resigning two years later.

General Swift became U. S. Surveyor of the Port of New York in 1818 to 1827, then a civil engineer and superintendent of harbor improvements on the lakes 1829 to 1845.

He constructed railroads in several parts of the country, and in 1841 was appointed peace ambassador to Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

General Swift died at his home in Geneva, N. Y., July 23, 1865.

Automobile Trade Notes.

The national sales report for Willys-Overland Inc., covering the month just past, shows an increase of 71 per cent in the retail deliveries of the Great Six Willys-Knight Sedan over last year. This percentage takes on an increased meaning when it is known that the sales of this car in its first year were third among all cars in the high price group in this country.

According to announcement just made by the Reo company, the month which has just been brought to a close has completely eclipsed the corresponding month of a year ago and April of 1924 goes down as the largest month in the history of the Reo Motor Car Company with respect to shipments.

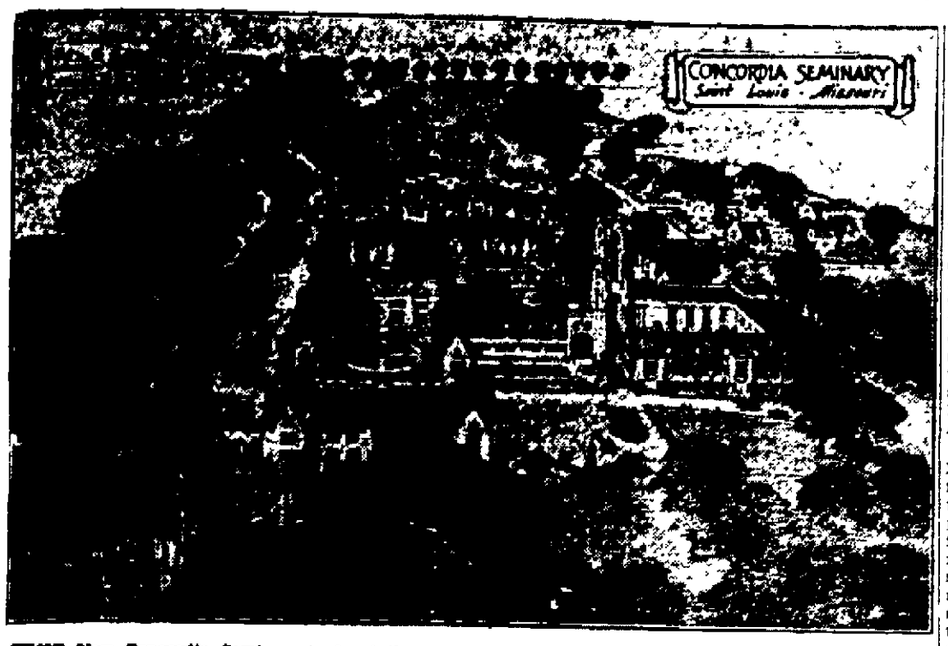
Lutherans to Dedicate New Three Million Dollar Seminary on June 13th

First Educational Institution Was a Log Cabin Hut in Perry County, Missouri



THE New Concordia Seminary, at St. Louis, Mo., shown above, to be dedicated on June 13th, is the leading theological school of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio, and other States and one of the finest institutions of its kind in the country. It is located in the western section of Saint Louis, about four blocks from Forest Park, on the wooded, forest-like site occupied by the Philippine Village at the time of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in 1904. The group of buildings may be enlarged in the future as necessary and at present includes an administration building, two lecture halls, an auditorium, a library, a service building, two dining halls, ten dormitory units, a power house and fourteen faculty dwellings. The style of architecture is ecclesiastic throughout and the material employed is local stone of varied shades of gray and pink with Indiana lime stone trim and tracery. The cost for the buildings erected up to date is $3,000,000. The funds were raised by freewill subscriptions among the 2,200 congregations of the Missouri Synod and there remains an oversubscription of almost one million dollars.

Lutherans of Saint Louis are making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the thousands of guests expected to attend the dedicatory ceremonies. Besides the one thousand accredited delegates present for the 33rd International Convention of the Missouri Synod, to take place from June 9th to 19th in that city, excursionists and tourists are expected to bring the number of out-of-town visitors to 100,000. Special excursions will be run from Chicago, Ft. Wayne, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Cleveland and other cities, and the committee on housing has been swamped with requests for reservations from thousands of automobile tourists. The Rev. J. W. Behnken of Houston, Texas, will deliver the main dedicatory address and a mass choir of several thousand voices, composed of the singing organizations of fifty Lutheran Churches, has been organized for the occasion.

The erection of this splendid group of buildings was made necessary by the constantly increasing number of theological students sent from eight preparatory schools to complete their training for the Lutheran pastorate. The student body today numbers 400, and although a class of 96 will be graduated in June to enter the ministry in the course of the summer an even larger enrollment is expected in September, when the new buildings will be occupied. Preparatory schools at Fort Wayne, Ind., Milwaukee, Wis., Bronxville N. Y., Saint Paul, Minn., Concordia, Mo., Winfield, Kansas, Conover, N. C., Oakland, Cal., and Portland, Ore., report almost without exception that they will send larger classes than ever before. The newly founded schools in Edmonton, Alberta Can., and Houston, Texas, will also begin to send students within a few years.

The history of Concordia Seminary tells of a most remarkable growth. A little log cabin, built by three candidates for the ministry in the wilds of Perry County, Missouri, some eighty years ago, marked the beginning of the Missouri Synod's educational endeavors. Constant and rapid growth made necessary the removal of the institution to Saint Louis and the building of and abandonment of two buildings in South Saint Louis. Besides the institutions mentioned a second theological seminary is maintained in Springfield, Ill., with 235 students, and two normal schools for the training of parish school teachers at River Forest, Ill., and Seward, Nebr. Recently Valparaiso University, known as "The Poor Man's Harvard," was acquired by interested laymen and Dr. W. H. T. Dau, professor at Concordia Seminary of Saint Louis, will head this new addition to the educational institutions of the Missouri Synod. Foreign schools for the training of native preachers and teachers are maintained in Brazil, Argentine, China, India and Australia.

Lutheran leaders look to the New Concordia as the rallying point for positive Christian teaching. The training given the thousands of preachers who have gone forth from this seminary since its founding has always and is today based solely and alone on the Bible, which is held to be God's infallible word and the only source of faith, doctrine and practice. Until now the clergy graduated from Concordia offers an unbroken front against every shade and color of so-called modernism and the old-fashioned Gospel of Jesus, the Lamb of God, slain for the sins of the world, may be heard from every pulpit occupied by a graduate of Concordia. To this unequivocal holding to the Scriptures is attributed the rapid and solid growth experienced, for it is felt that today more than ever a positive, firm, unshakable adherence to Scripture is the need of the [illegible]

Throughout all America—the pendulum is swinging to Paige!

The amazing fact that a Paige can now be bought for nearly a thousand dollars less accounts for some of this increased popularity.

And why not? No car is more beautiful. None is more carefully built of higher quality materials. No engine is more modern, more efficient than the powerful and economical Paige-built motor. HEARTS COURAGEOUS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHO are your heroes? Though the brave
Deserve the tribute of the free,
I'm sure not all the banners wave
For some no banners wave at all;
And yet some heroes I recall
With hearts courageous, though no scrolls
Pay tribute to their fighting souls.

I know a woman, one who had
Husband and house, and wealth and ease,
Yes, all the things that make you glad
Who know the joy of things like these;
And then she lost them, one by one;
They slipped away as slips the sun,
Until she stood as stands the lone
Old oak when all the birds have flown.

As stands the oak! For still she stood,
Her roots in earth, her head in heaven,
And spoke of life as something good,
And thought of grief as something given.
However hard her hardest mile,
She wore for poverty a smile,
And talked of God in all her grief
With stronger faith and more belief.

And I, who have my petty loss,
Seek not new courage in old tales;
I see a woman with a cross,
Yet one whose laughter never fails.
Who are your heroes? You who read
The story of some stranger's deed,
May see the brave in tales of war
While some great soul smiles on next door.

The Hotel Stenographer

By Rube Fullerton

"LOOK at 'em smoking'" said the House Detective with disapproval.

"I see 'em every day, drop into the lobby here to puff a coffin tack," answered the Hotel Stenographer, glancing at three girls in a big divan in Peacock Alley. "I don't mind 'em, Kelly, because I know it is not their fault.

"I do not smoke, though I do not deserve any particular credit for being one of the few who do not. We are all the result of our home training. Those girls live in families where fathers and mothers play twenty-five-cent limit, and both sides of the family carry a cigarette case. Of course they smoke. Youngsters imitate their parents from the time they play house, and dress up in their parents' clothes to do it.

"I come from a family where father still drinks his coffee out of a mustache cup.

"My mother is religious, too, and her children are all hand-spanked. I am past twenty-one, but not past spanking, and if I lit one of those things in our flat, I know what would happen to me, although I would not be in a position to see it. We still put all the dinner on the table at one time and say grace, so I would hardly be expected to smoke.

"As the lady said, when her daughter fell in the well, it is mighty hard to raise a daughter, but most of us imitate our mothers and make a few improvements on the model, and let it go at that.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

WORLD—HER HUSBAND

Chapter I.

FOR three days and nights Piedmont Spray was all action, forcefulness and enthusiasm, not to say pep.

The idea had come to him to refurbish his fishing tackle, to make it gleam like new and shine like the deuce, and every spare second and every loose moment he was shining, painting, nickeling, scraping and polishing.

He arose at five in the morning to get in a few extra rubs before breakfast. He hurried home from the office to shine and scrub before supper, and after supper he stayed up rooting and pointing till the small hours of the morning.

Chapter II.

"Piedmont," said Mrs. Spray thickly, "I wonder if you'd mind fixing the kitchen stove for me? I'm sure it wouldn't take you more than a minute, or an hour at the most."

Piedmont Spray drew himself up to his full height and expansion, and his eyes blazed with honest indignation.

"I'm a business man—not a carpenter or a mechanic," he withered. "When I come home for peace and quietness, thoroughly exhausted by the day's toil—by what am I greeted? By a soothing and comforting sympathy? No! By a cold-blooded demand that I spend the night hopping on and off kitchen tables. Bo, Gosh, by the Lord Harry, no!"

New Value to Alder

Alder, which is much used as a wood in making furniture in those sections where it grows on a commercial scale, may have another value for shredding dust for furniture. It is now believed that the little soldier or "bumper" on the roots of alder have nitrogen fixation properties. The chemists chemists have been working on what theory and American universities have been attempting to prove it with some degree of success. If it is true, the alder having the ability to take nitrogen direct from the air would a great soil builder.

Annual Concert of City Grade Schools

Large Audience Delighted With Ability Displayed at Fifth Annual Concert at High School Auditorium Friday Afternoon.

On Friday afternoon the Kingston High School auditorium was filled to the doors with parents, friends and classmates of the school children who took part in the fifth annual concert given by the pupils of Kingston grade schools. Each year the concerts are better in many ways, and the audiences are beginning to be more interested in the music while still very much intrested in the particular part that the children in whom they are especially interested take in the program.

In the absence of Dr. Michael, superintendent of schools, Principal Miner of School No. 6 welcomed the audience and paid a well-deserved tribute to Charles R. Spaulding, who had special charge of the instrumental music, and to Miss Grace A. Badger, assistant supervisor, who has faithfully and efficiently drilled the children in their respective schools in vocal music.

There were some decidedly outstanding features of this year's concert. The enunciation of every class that sang was marvelously clear, needing no text printed on the program to make the songs perfectly understandable. The part singing was excellent, and whether singing in parts or unison, the children's voices were true to pitch. All of the leaders were remarkably successful in holding their choruses right to time and tune, but especial mention might well be made of tiny Miss Garee Whispell, leader of the first grad singers, for she showed remarkable grace in conducting and a personality which made her a real little leader.

It was a pretty big thing for Dorothy Cline to lead the Combined Grade Schools' Orchestra, but she did it admirably and the playing of that orchestra gathered together from eight separate schools was just as admirable.

The piano solo, Les Sylphes, by Bachman, was remarkably well played by Mildred Hass. Quite an innovation on the program was the eccentric dance given by Cyrilla Carter, who was obliged to give an encore number.

Fine as the orchestra was, the Combined Grade Schools' Band ran it a close second, the wood-winds being especially good.

The full program was as follows:

Summer Dance Frocks Are Delicate in Tint and Texture—Flower-Like in Silhouette and Delightful Generally.

Come June and one has midsummer night as well as day dreams concerning among other things—evening gowns. Diaphanous things have an appeal which is all mixed up with moonlight and cool verandas—Regal evening dresses, gorgeous and exotic gowns in which one has queened it throughout the winter, seem entirely out of the picture and tulle, chiffon and lace suddenly seem to satisfy the repressions from which we have suffered. Of course smart Paris had its black gown, diaphanous always, but perhaps the Parisienne is more sophisticated, in any event, here in American color makes a more general appeal to the girl who has country club life ahead of her and week-end parties to costume.

Silver Lame and Bright and Pale Blue Tulle de Sole Combine in This Dance Frock, the Applique Motifs in Dark Blue, Yellow and Two Shades of Rose Ornament the Foundation Skirt and Are Also Posed at the Waistline.

Tulle just naturally does not take kindly to being crushed into week-end bags, but it makes, for all that, the ideal dance frock, being newer than chiffon at the moment. Some really charming ruffled tulles are being worn, and frocks of this fairy like genre have a fascinating way of being longer by many inches.

The tulle gown is usually full skirted and attached to a bodice which defines the figure and is often of contrasting material, V necklines are nearly always chosen when the bodice is veiled with tulle. While flowers seem a natural accompaniment to this sort of dress, color contrasts are more apt these days to result from perky ribbon bows perched jauntily on shoulder or, at waistline, at front or side, although extremists are fond of introducing the bustle sash.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

The man at WHT, who gives what he calls "athaletic" news insists that appropriate music be played softly while he talks. Last night he suggested "The Wearing of the Green" as the proper tune to accompany his golf news, which wasn't so bad.

The clarity and volume of WTIC during the daylight hours of early evening was unexcelled by the big New York stations.

The time is at hand when there will be many nights on which only an extremely nearby station will get through. WDBZ can do it and will do it if enough interest is shown. Membership in WDBZ Radio Club is the practical way to show your interest. So far most fans have "Let George do it" so far as supporting the home station goes and now they are urged to share the work.

THE GOWN OF GOWNS FOR THE DAY OF DAYS.

By Eleanor Gunn.

This Bridal Gown Has Pearl Embroidery on Net in Simulation of a Lace Design, Three of Net Long Yard to Accentuate the Tunic Idea.

The Suggestion of a Yoke and the Fitted Sleeve Are Important Considerations.

The Bride With Her Old Fashioned Bouquet is Wearing the Fullest Blue Satin Ribbon Embroidered With Pearls and Bows to Tradition by the Introduction of Princess and Petit Point Lace. The Blue Wedding Gown is the Sensation of the Season.

June-time is bride-time. Every household is either preparing for a wedding of its own, selecting gifts or getting ready to attend somebody's wedding as guest or attendant. Wedding bells are in the air. Trousseaux talk is everywhere. Thrilling times these and with it all much responsibility, many momentous decisions as to how to drape the veil and how to make the gown.

What color it shall be, curiously enough comes under discussion, for there are the days when brides defy traditions, by wearing pale pink or blue, and many wear skirts to their knees or skirts which sweep the floor. The rule do style, or period type of gown is always a happy choice for that precaution up the aisle. A bride is entitled certainly to a hint of the picturesque and even a hint of the theatrical. One may prefer the charm of the smallest gown, or one may be more eager to "look natural," therefore wisely refraining from anything out of one's usual vein.—The gowns sketched here are picturesque quality in evidence, their long sleeves covering a bit of the Medieval. One sees at a glance that they are designed with more than the aisle in view—it is easy to visualize them, with or without their sleeves in the immediate future. To the right is a gown for the maid which has also a future for it is the sort of thing that chooses to dance in just now, having the approved fullness of skirt, in this instance rather prettily banded with ribbon. Bridesmaids' gowns have a pleasant fashion of being in pastels and tulle is being frequently chosen this spring—pastel hues and soft being also charming backgrounds for bridal satin or pearl corrugated lace.

Here is a Charming Gown for Either One or All Attendants. Fashioned of Taffeta it Has Quaint Insertings of Ribbon and Soft Chest of Gauntch on Shoulder and Skirt.

DANCE!
TONIGHT
WHITE EAGLE HALL
St. Louis Five Will Play.

Old Time Dances At Firemen's Ball

One of the big attractions at the firemen's ball Wednesday evening will be the old fashioned dances which will be called off by "Jim" Pierce. In order to give those who enjoy the old time dances some real fun, the committee in charge has arranged with Mr. Pierce to call off for a few dances in the old fashioned way of years gone by. For those who do not dance the old dances it will be a pleasure to watch the older generation as they dance to the music of Paul Zucca and Harry Maisenhelder. These two orchestras will furnish the music for the dance which will be held in the armory.

The firemen's ball is under the auspices of Rapid, Excelsior and Cordts Hose Companies and the proceeds will go toward paying the cost of the trip to Port Jervis to attend the firemen's convention there in June.

WELL KNOWN BARITONE AT RHINEBECK RECITAL

James Murray, baritone, will be the assisting artist at the Sunday recital at 4 o'clock daylight saving time in the Church of the Messiah, Rhinebeck. This will be the last in the season's series of monthly musicals, given by W. Raymond Randall, organist, assisted by the choir under his direction and artists from New York, which have been well attended and appreciated.

Mr. Randall, a concert organist of repute, will play some modern French works and the ever popular transscription to that English "Land of Hope and Glory."

Mr. Murray sang for many years in grand and comic opera with the Metropolitan and Hammerstein companies but devotes his time to concertizing and teaching. He numbers among his pupils George O'Brien, famous tenor heard in Rhinebeck this season. He is also a member of the well-known Fairfield quartet and a radio artist.

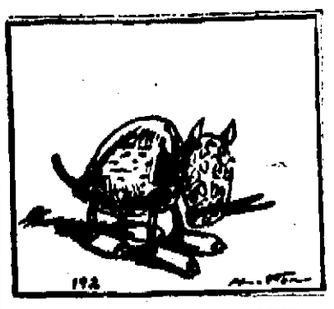
The organ is a three manual Skinner, the gift of Vincent Astor, and one of the finest in the Hudson valley.

PASTOR NELSON, SPEAKER AT CHICHESTER MEETING.

The Community Club of Chichester called on the Rev. W. J. Nelson, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, to its regular meeting Friday night in their hall at Chichester, to give the address which is one of the features of the regular meeting of this wide awake organization. The program consisted of community singing, the showing of two splendid reels, with an equipment as good as that of the best "movies," the address by Pastor Nelson and a social hour and refreshments. Mr. Nelson spoke on "Americanism." His remarks were enthusiastically received by the entire audience, and just as readily they later responded to his leading in the singing of patriotic songs.

Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HUTTON.



THE OSCAR WILDE BORE.

This particular species of wilde bore is not hunted and dispatched as frequently as might be for the good of society, as it is somewhat of a pest, and so far as is known, serves no useful purpose. It abounds in any bohemian districts, and has made such a nuisance of itself that it is a discredit to Oscar Wilde, who is supposed to have first discovered it. Wilde spoke of it symbolically in his "Salome," where he had the head of the bore brought in on a platter for the feast in King Herod's palace. The American Museum of Nutty Natural History is urging the government to place a liberal bounty on the destruction of this beast.

The body of the creature is an ordinary almond, and the head is a rather long single peanut. The tucks are toothpicks, the ears popcorn, and the feet split peanuts, while the legs and tail are cloves. All the parts are stuck together with chewing gum.

Porter, and gave an inspiring and helpful talk that fairly bristled with good common sense. Messrs. Ramming, Black and Kirchner for the Redeemer Church Club made brief addresses. The heartiness of the singing of the community songs that followed was unusual and the get together social hour that followed the program was certainly successful in its suggestion of a closer relation of the uptown and downtown churches. The Men's Club of the Redeemer it has been asserted are going to stage a return in the near future and the Fair Street Church organization has assured them that they will be ready.

FROM PALETTE TO MORTAR BOARD

Young women artists turn from their jars of color and paint brushes to assist plasterers in setting ornaments in place atop huge pylons which adorn the main entrances to the Palace of Agriculture and Food Products, of the vast exhibition buildings which forms a part of the great Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition being staged in Philadelphia from June 1 to December 1 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Climbing ladders and walking along rickety scaffolds is nothing new to these young ladies, but each time they do it they get a thrill.

New York, May 15.—One typical American youth will be picked from every community in New York state to represent the American Legion post of his neighborhood at Plattsburg and other Citizen's Military Training Camps of the Second Corps Area this summer, under a plan announced today by Colonel Joseph Bondy, newly appointed chairman of the Legion's state committee on C. M. T. camps.

The American Legion plan contemplates employment of its entire membership to promote interest in the camps among the younger generation of the state. Besides selecting one outstanding youngster as their special candidate, the Legionnaires of all posts will conduct a campaign to swell the ranks of the C. M. T. C. students by enrolling special quotas for all citizens' camps to be conducted by the government, Colonel Bondy said.

GOOD THINGS

The following cakes and cookies are good as long as they last. Doughnuts made with honey keep well and are moist much longer than those prepared with sugar.

Honey Doughnuts.—Take two eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of strained honey, one cupful of sour milk, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, and add a little salt. Roll as soft as possible and fry in deep fat.

Spice Cookies.—Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar, and one cupful of molasses in which one teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved. Add three and one-half cupfuls of flour, cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg to taste, with one-half to a whole cupful of chopped raisins. Add a few chopped nuts if liked. When well mixed drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheets. Sprinkle with sugar and bake.

Orange Cake.—Beat well the yolks of five eggs, add half of a cupful of water, two cupfuls of sugar, beating until well blended. Add two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add the juice and grated rind of one orange and fold in the well beaten whites of three eggs. Bake in layers, and ice with the following: To the two remaining whites, beaten stiff, add powdered sugar together with orange juice and the grated rind until the icing is of the right consistency to spread.

Chocolate Potato Cake.—Blend two-thirds of a cupful of shortening with two cupfuls of sugar; add two-thirds of a cupful of grated chocolate and one cupful of warm mashed potatoes, one cupful each of seeded raisins and chopped nuts, one-half cupful of milk and two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add four eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg and a teaspoonful of cinnamon. If baked in a loaf in a slow oven in a paper lined pan for one hour, it will keep a month.

Broadcasting Stations You Have Heard—WSAI

Station WSAI of the United States Playing Card Company at Cincinnati, is among the outstanding broadcasting stations of the country; it is up with the leaders in power, for it has a 5000 watt Western Electric equipment. And it is among the leaders in quality of entertainment, for it is teaching the nation to play bridge by radio.

In conjunction with other stations, bridge games in which experts take part are regularly broadcast.

The plan is to have four experts play a deal of Auction Bridge and to broadcast each bid and each play of the deal, together with the reasons for each bid and each play. Prior to each broadcasting, listeners-in are informed as to the names of the participants so that on the night of the game any four may play the deal, and each player be named after one of the four experts and take the same relative position at the table as that occupied by his expert namesake. The result of the draw for partners and deal is announced, and then the cards dealt to each expert. The bidding then follows, after which each play is announced so that the players can play the same cards that the experts do.

The bell tower of the plan in which WSAI has its home shelters the famous radio chime—the only chime of bells in the United States made for broadcasting and operated for that purpose. There are twelve bells in the group. An idea of the size of the chimes—which are graduated from small to large—may be had from the fact that their total weight exceeds 20,000 pounds.

Socony Scores Over Uni-Slyke

The fifth inning was a big inning for both the Uni-Slyke and Socony nines at the Athletic Field Friday evening, the Uni-Slyke losing the game, for their first defeat in the Industrial League this season. Score: 7-4.

Up until this inning neither team had been doing much, and it looked as if Socony was going to take the game with the two runs they had scored in the first and third innings.

The fireworks began when Williams hit a double to right field, scoring Shultis, who had been passed to first for the third time. The attack kept up with Hasbrouck, Cragan, Kline and Bradley hitting singles. Moosa was walked and Robinson hit another single to center. The inning ended when Corregan struck out for the second time in the inning and Williams was put out at first, Butler unassisted. Six runs, six hits.

Uni-Slyke came to bat eight runs in the rear, but they were full of fight and gave the Oilmen an awful scare. Tongue singled to left to start things going and Cassidy hit to right Cassidy was forced at second when Norton hit to Shultis, who threw to Cragan. Pioskie struck out. Nichols got a hit through second base, scoring Tongue and Norton. Atkins singled, and Colvin hit for two bases, scoring Nichols and Atkins. Williams hit a high one and Bradley muffed it. Butler singled down the right field line and Colvin scored. Williams and Butler scored when Bradley threw the ball to center field. Seven runs, six hits.

Corregan and Williams were pitching fine ball until the fifth inning, when both weakened. Cragan pitched the last inning for Socony.

Bridgeport Nine Here Sunday

With the American Chain team of Bridgeport, Connecticut, as their opponents, the Kingston Colonials will make an effort Sunday afternoon to pound out their second win of the season. This is the Chain team's first trip to Kingston and although not having played much in this section, have established quite a record in Connecticut.

Not having been called to duty last Sunday, Art Smith will probably go to work on the mound for the locals Sunday. As Kelly Norbet was also inactive last week it is most likely he will be on the receiving end of Art's benders. The balance of Eddie Phelp's line up will probably be the same as last week although there might be one or two slight changes in the fielding positions.

Walter Walker, manager of the visitors, has three strong possibilities for the box work in Kohout, Althusem or Targon. Warge will be on the receiving end of the Chain's twirling staff.

Tagging Major League Bases

A homer by Babe Ruth, his eleventh of the season and his third in two days, enabled the Yankees to beat Cleveland for the third time in succession, 2 to 1. Levsen allowed the Yanks only two hits but lost the decision to Myles Thomas, whose fine hurling made New York's pennant stock soar like steel during a war scare.

The amazing Athletics walloped the White Sox again, 6 to 5, by scoring three runs in the ninth. The Sox started with a rush but curled up before Joe Pate, whose relief pitching brought considerable relief to Connie Mack.

Every afternoon paper in St. Louis put out an extra as the Browns beat Washington, 10 to 7. Ken Williams contributed a homer.

The Tigers cut another large slice of Boston pie, swamping the Red Sox 8 to 1. It would have been worse if the Sox hadn't pulled a triple play in the second inning.

John McGraw's travelling invalids knocked Rixey off the mound but couldn't do a thing with Jakie May and lost to the Reds 6 to 4. The Reds bunched their seven hits effectively off Greenfield and Davis, Hargrave doing most of the dirty work with two doubles and a single.

Brooklyn and Pittsburgh battled in the rain for eight innings to a 5 to 5 tie and were then forced to call off the pastime when several players were nearly drowned. Babe Herman, coast slugger, batted 1,000 with four hits.

Original "Russians"

The name "Russia" is derived from the name given to the Swedish Vikings or Varangians, who established themselves at Novgorod and were called Rus, or Rossi. These words are Slavonic and Greek corruptions of Ruotsi, the name applied to the Swedes, denoting rowers or seafarers.

Jr. O. U. A. M. Beat Legion Nine

All decked out in new spick and span uniforms the J. O. U. A. M. could hardly do anything else but win their Twilight League contest Friday evening, so they drove the American Legion forces back with hits and scored seven runs while the soldiers were pushing one marker across the plate.

The Mechanics got McDaniels for three important blows the opening frame and then after this session were able to connect for but one hit a frame. Three of the Mechanics hit to left field the first session and just as many runners crossed the platter. The uniformed outfit were good for three more runs the fourth frame. One of the Mechanics was nipped in the arm by one of McDaniels' benders and then after a couple of soldiers had committed boots, Rider crashed into a three-base knock and the Mechanics had three more runs and their final total of seven markers.

Lester Caunitz performed a snappy brand of twirling for the uniformed outfit having the soldiers tamed most of the time. The first two men up for the Legion hit Les for base blows, which finally resulted in the Legion's lone run but after this opening outburst Caunitz started striking them out, fanning nine before the contest ended. Caunitz only allowed the soldiers one more blow, this coming in the third and finishing up the quota of the American Legion.

JONES AND HARRIS ON EQUAL TERMS

Sandwich, England, May 15.—The American and British amateur golf champions are engaged in a battle for the honor of winning the St. George's vase tournament.

Bobby Jones, the American champion, finished the first round of the thirty-six holes medal play with an 81, and was conceded to be the leader.

The word was passed along the course, however, and Robert Harris, the British champion, tightened his game and turned in an 81, tieing Jones.

The two champions start this afternoon in the second and final eighteen on equal terms as far as their cards go, but with youth serving Jones, who is about twenty years junior to Harris.

The British champion, however, has a better knowledge of the Sandwich course and is more accustomed to the vagaries of the coastal winds which sweep the course.

KINGSTON ALL STARS AT PORT JERVIS SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon the local All Stars will be the attraction at Port Jervis. Last season the locals trimmed the Port Jervis club the first game by a 2-1 score. The next two games the Port Jervis club won by a 4-0 and 1-0 scores. This is the only club that was shutout against the All Stars last season.

Reports from Port Jervis say they have a much faster club than last season. However, the locals have now won their first two games and are out to make it three straights.

Manager McCardle has received offers from many very fast semi-pro clubs, among them being the North Adams club of Massachusetts, whom the local manager has been booked with the last part of May. He also has several more which will be booked for June and July.

KINGSTON PLAYERS WITH MIDDLETOWN GRAYS

Jack Robins, Natty Deegan and Bill Schwab, former Colonials, who have signed up with the Middletown Grays, will be in the line up of this outfit when they open their season Sunday afternoon in Brooklyn with the Farmers as their opponents. Joe Hoffman, Kingston All-Star player, will also make the trip with the Middles as utility infielder.

Pauline Forward.

Barcelona, May 15.—The Basque Heavyweight Paulino this morning was a 5 to 2 favorite to win over Ermanio Spalla, of Italy, present heavyweight champion of Europe, in their battle for the championship here tonight.

70,000 Will See Kentucky Derby

Seventeen Thoroughbreds Slated To Face The Barrier—Pompey Is The General Choice To Win With Bubbling Over Following.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

Louisville, Ky., May 15.—Quietude strangely inappropos of the stampede that is to come; a lone policeman stalking his beat and peering inquiringly into automobiles from which the owners' feet protrude; absolute strangers snoring side by side in hotel corridors as they lie upon $7.50 cots, which rent at $15 a night; scrub women rounding up a litter of paper, cigarette stubs and the what not of a lobby on the morning after; long, silent rows of Pullmans on a siding with upper and lower guests; derelicts on park benches shivering in the dawn.

This was Louisville this morning, ten hours before the running of the great Kentucky derby. A city of sleeping men, its civic life inert, its public pulse at lowest ebb.

The army of occupation was at ease, while it dreamed a dream of a jowl-to-jowl finish, of 70,000 screaming the name of a horse that may hear but cannot understand, of a welter of dust and thundering hoofs as they sweep down over the finish; then the wreath of roses for the horse that won the race and some $50,000 to the man who merely happened to own him.

It was to be the fifty-second running of the derby and possibly the greatest of them all. Seventeen thoroughbreds, representative of the ultimate in three-year-old development, were to go to the post in the 1¼ mile race and at least a dozen of them had a chance.

W. R. Coe's Pompey, two-year-old champion of 1925, was the general choice to win but for every $5 that figured to ride on his nose there was four more that will go with the Bradley entry of Bubbling Over, Bagenbaggage and Boot to Boot. Display, winner of the Preakness, was not without a scattering esteem, and there were those who vowed Griffith's Canter would redeem his Preakness showing just as did the great Zev in 1923.

Blondin was another colt that could win this race without occasioning undue surprise while Light Carbine, Rockman and Rhinock were given an outside chance by the sharpshooters.

It was, in fact, to be one of those things known as an "open" race and sectional jealousy was at the crescendo. The east, having rolled into town in endless pullmans, was almost solidly behind its horse, Pompey, born, bred and trained in an eastern atmosphere. Kentucky, the home of the thoroughbred horse, lined up behind Bubbling Over and, to hear them tell it, only Pompey has a chance to head this dazzling star of the Bradley String.

Bubbling Over was not supposed to be a mudder but that was of slight consideration in view of the fact that the track was dry and fast, although the weather was cloudy. However, should a sudden storm blow up at race hour, as was the case last year, they say Pompey could not lose. He is supposed to run well under all conditions but that he absolutely thrives on mud.

Because of his great speed, Johnson is expected to take Bubbling Over to the pace in the early going and try to keep him there. The colt has an outside position at the post and can be figured to escape interference on the break. Pompey is not so fortunate. He was drawn between Canter and Display and anything may happen. Both are known as "Bad actors."

However, the break may prove of negligible importance in the final analysis. The race is long enough for any horse to find his running some time before the judges stand is reached, the only difficulty being to pick the one that does his running the fastest and farthest.

It might very well be neither of the favorites, for derby history shows a series of form contradictions. For example, Aristides was sent to the first derby in 1875 as a pace-maker for Chesapeake. Aristides did that little thing and kept everlastingly at it until he crossed the finish a winner.

E. D. Bradley's 1921 victory furnishes another example. He declared to win with Black Servant but the colt's stable companion, Behave Yourself, headed the other at the wire.

Donerail, the 1913 winner, paid no less than $184.90 on a two dollar ticket and the list of outsiders that won most certainly is equalled only by that of the favorites who didn't.

But regardless of the winner's pre-race prominence, or lack of it, the victory automatically bequeaths a fame that is immortal. The race may not determine the three-year-old champion of the year but it does the next best thing: It determines the identity of a horse whose name will still live on when the champion's name is dead.

There is only one Kentucky Derby and it will be held today at Churchill Downs.

Snappy Smoker Promised.

The smoker scheduled for Monday evening at St. Mary's Hall under the auspices of the Holy Name Society promises to be smart, snappy and satisfactory in all respects. The program is being completed and the committee in charge state that by Monday evening the stage will be all set.

Charles River Races.

Boston, May 15.—Striving to obtain the third win in five starts, Coach Fred Newell will send his Harvard 150 pound eight against the rival crews from Princeton and Yale late today on the Charles River. A fast, close race is expected with no crew ranking as favorite.

The photograph shows Walter Johnson, premier pitcher for the Washington American team, and Capt Edith Irvings of the Salvation army, for whom Johnson autographed ten baseballs to be given to the ten best-behaved boys at the Salvation Army summer camps.

Baseball Gets Another Member of Ames Family

The Leon (Red) Ames that was a National league favorite for nearly a score of years is out of the majors and just pitches occasionally nowadays, but Leon Ames, the second, son of the baseball patriarch, is trying to emblazon the family name in baseball records again as a member of Ohio State's freshman ball team.

If heredity has anything to do with producing pitchers this yearling team of Ohio State's ought to have the best twirler it ever had. And more than just heredity, young Ames has had many years of direct contact with baseball and ever since he threw away his rattle his father has been teaching him the fine points of pitching.

Ames, senior, was a member of the Giants' mound staff from 1903 to 1913 during which time the Giants won pennants on the average of every other year, triumphing in 1904, '05, '10, '11 and '12. He was with the Cincinnati Reds for a couple of seasons, then with the Cardinals for four years, and a stay with the Phillies wound up his National league career.

Girl Breaks Record

Above is pictured Lillian Copeland, famous girl athlete of the Pasadena Athletic club, who broke the national record for the discus throw and the shot put in the dual meet with the Santa Ana Junior college girls' team. Miss Copeland tossed the shot a distance of 35 feet 7¾ inches, the former record being just 35 feet. She hurled the discus 95 feet 8 inches, bettering the old mark by 6 feet 8 inches.

King George Holed Out in One—Into Cow's Ear

How King George, when golfing some years ago holed out in one—into a cow's ear—is disclosed by Sir Theodore Andrea Cook, editor of Field, in a new book published here. He relates that some time ago he published in Field the following story:

"A distinguished golfer in Scotland who had just played his approach shot was distressed to see his ball lift a cow. He walked up, but the ball was nowhere to be seen. Shaking her head more in sorrow than in anger, the offended quadruped moved forward and then dropped the sphere upon the green out of her left ear."

The story at the time was received with derision, and now Sir Theodore, in his book, reveals the identity of the distinguished golfer.

Young Stribling Out-Smarts Risko

Georgia Boy Takes Six of Ten Rounds Against Cleveland Fighter —Chick Suggs Beat English Bantam Champion.

New York, May 15.—Young Stribling of Georgia is expected to rule a favorite in his bout with Paul Berlenbach, June 10, as the result of having won a decision last night over the hard-hitting Johnny Risko of Cleveland, in their ten round bout at Madison Square Garden Risko recently won a decision over Berlenbach.

Stribling out-smarted the Cleveland lad from the first bell and when Risko, stung by the southerner's fast left jabs, started roughing it, he found that Stribling was no novice in this style. The Georgian took six of the ten rounds in the resulting rough-and-tumble, with his speed blinding Risko in all but the second, eighth, ninth and tenth rounds.

Toward the end of the fight, Stribling showed the effect of the repeatedly low left hooks and in the tenth he sagged into a clinch, his face taking on an expression of pain. But he hung on and covered up until the final bell.

Chick Suggs, New England Negro bantam, technically knocked out Johnny Brown, English champion at the weight, in the fifth round of the semi-final bout. Brown started out as though he were going to provide real and unexpected competition, causing Suggs to miss repeatedly in the first round and catching him with neat counters to the jaw.

The second round was a veritable hurricane of wallops as Suggs solved Brown's style and drew up on even terms with him. From this session on, Suggs forged ahead, his opponent tiring rapidly, until he was unable to defend himself after two minutes of the fifth round when the referee stepped in between them.

BUD TAYLOR SCORES OVER TOMMY RYAN

Louisville, Ky., May 15.—Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, in spite of his thrilling twelve round victory over Tommy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., was just one of a milling crowd of enthusiastic derby fans today. He received no more attention than did any of the other hundred or so celebrities here.

The Taylor-Ryan bout, staged last night for the entertainment of derby fans, was not a great fight, but it kept several thousand spectators in a frenzy of excitement.

It was a "no decision" affair, but when the final gong sounded the Indiana battler was out in front with a clear margin of points. He had to hustle all the way, and when he left the ring Taylor was smeared with claret from his own nose. The Pennsylvanian showed little effects of the hard milling.

Friends of Taylor were gratified to see that he showed little or no effects of the severe mental strain undergone since his tragic fight in Milwaukee that resulted in the death of Clever Sencio.

New Law Gives Bigger Pensions

Provisions of New Pension Bill Explained by Congressman Pratt—Affects Spanish War Veterans and Their Widows.

Spanish-American War veterans, their widows and women who served as nurses between April 21, 1898, and July 4, 1902, will be awarded increased pensions under the bill passed by congress and signed by President Coolidge May 1, according to explanation by Representative Harcourt J. Pratt of this district.

The minimum to veterans will be $20 monthly and the maximum $50 and all veterans may be placed on the list who served at least 90 days during the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection or the China relief expedition, or who served less than 90 days and were discharged because of disability incurred in line of duty, except that veterans or nurses now drawing pensions who may become on account of age or physical or mental disabilities helpless or blind, or so much so as to require the regular aid and attendance of another person, will be entitled to $72.

The law will operate, according to Congressman Pratt, to grant $20 monthly to any veteran attaining the age of 62; $30 at 68, $40 at 72; and $50 at 75, providing he is not helpless. This will give to the veteran now drawing $12 a rate of $20; the veteran drawing $15 a rate of $25; the veteran drawing $18 a rate of $30; the veteran drawing $24 a rate of $40; the veteran drawing $30 a rate of $50.

Widows or former widows who have remarried will receive $30 monthly if they were married to the veteran before September 1, 1922. Widows or former widows will receive six dollars for each child under 16 years of age.

Although the bill became a law May 1, it is provided that it will not become effective until the fourth day of the next month after approval, which will be June 4. Veterans other than those who are helpless will be increased automatically without having to apply to the Pension Bureau.

Financial and Commercial

New York, May 15.—Renewal of bearish selling of the motor stocks in the short session of the market today resulted in fresh declines in prices of a number of the active motors to the lowest price levels of the year. As usual, the bears selected Hudson to receive the brunt of their attack, and that stock moved down about 5 points to 57½. Dodge, Jordan and other motor stocks followed Hudson to the lower price ranges, while General Motors remained steady.

Strength of the British pound sterling in the foreign exchange markets was in startling contrast to the weakness of the continental exchanges today. Sterling was quoted above par for the first time in 12 years, while the French, Italian and Belgian exchanges continued to scrape bottom.

The independent steel stocks were again under pressure and some losses of a point or more were recorded in light trading. The coppers showed better resistance. United States Steel sold in small volume around 120, and narrow price changes were recorded for the bulk of industrial speculative leaders. The rubber and tire stocks were liberally supplied, United States Rubber declining more than a point to a new low for the year at 53.

Selling pressure relaxed in the second hour, but there was no change in the general trend of prices. Virginia Iron and Coke broke 6 points to 40; Remington Typewriter, Foundation Company and Montgomery Ward sold down a point or two on slight offerings; General Asphalt was reactionary. Atlantic Coast Line led a brief rally in the railroad shares, in which, however, the activity was confined to a few stocks.

General weakness in all but the oil stocks continued until the close of the market. Hudson Motors sunk to the lowest price level of the year near the close, while Dodge, Willys-Overland and Continental Motors also recorded new low prices.

A sharp recovery in Italian lire brought the quotation back to 3.58 cents for the lira, following the advance of the British pound to 4.8675.

Rotary-Kiwanis Ladies' Night

Members of Both Organizations and Their Wives Enjoy Evening of Unalloyed Pleasure Together at Lake Katrine Grange Hall.

Kiwanians and Rotarians, their guests and ladies, enjoyed one of those joint Rotary-Kiwanis Ladies' Nights at Lake Katrine Grange Hall Friday evening that are always such a notable success. More than 100 were present and in addition to dancing to the music of Paul Zucca's harmonious and industrious orchestra, there were solos of a very high order by Mrs. Stephen H. Doty, contralto soloist of the First Reformed Church, and Mrs. J. Louis Dougherty of the Christian Science Church. Mrs. Doty sang "Answer" by Terry and "Rain" by Del Riego. Mrs. Dougherty's selections were "Life" and "Rain," both by Curran. As an encore Mrs. Dougherty and Mrs. Doty, who had never sung together and in fact had never met until a few minutes before, sang as a duet "Whispering Hope" in a manner that brought prolonged applause.

With Harry Lazarus as master of ceremonies, an announcer needing no megaphone, several contests calling for the exercise of a high order of skill, intellect and muscular strength were put on and prizes awarded to the winners, all of whom are too modest to permit their names being sent echoing down the corridors of time by publication in a newspaper. The names of the judges will also be permitted to rest under a pall of obscurity.

A salad supper was served by the Grange ladies and there was much singing in the dining room but no speechmaking—all of which contributed toward making the evening one of unalloyed pleasure.

Youth Kills Chiropractor

Leon Thomas Kills Dr. L. H. Miller, Whom He Accused of Not Being of Benefit in His Treatment.

Danbury, Conn., May 15.—Brooding over imaginary illness, Leon Thomas, 22, shot and killed Dr. Louis H. Miller, a local chiropractor, in the doctor's office in the center of the city late yesterday afternoon and induced his own brother to drive him to Bridgeport in a taxicab. The two youths left a clear trail and their capture by Bridgeport police an hour later was easily effected. Leon Thomas was today given a routine hearing in city court and was ordered held without bail on a charge of murder pending the inquest by Coroner John J. Phelan. The brother, Harold Thomas, was held as a material witness.

Leon Thomas, about whom little is known here, is said to have admitted the shooting. He worked about the yard of his boarding place on Main street yesterday and in the afternoon called on the doctor, accusing him of not being of benefit in his treatment. Then Thomas went to a barber shop to be shaved and afterward returned to Dr Miller's office and used his revolver which he hd been carrying.

The shooting was done in Dr. Miller's private office while another patient was waiting in an adjoining room. The office is located at Main and West streets, directly opposite the city hall and police station. Four shots were fired. One went wild and the others struck the doctor in the head, chest and abdomen.

Thomas walked away and the doctor attempted to follow, collapsing on the stairs and rolling down nearly to the sidewak.

AND THAT OTHER HOUR TO BUSINESS

I believe in taking good care of myself. I believe that health is our most precious possession. I believe that my body is entitled to a square deal. I believe all the advertisements. Every morning I do calisthenics for half an hour, followed by a cold bath and an alcohol rub. I brush my teeth for five minutes by the clock, and massage my scalp for ten. I brush in my shaving lather for the prescribed three minutes, and apply a healing lotion afterward. I use two sprays and three gargles for protection against colds, pyorrhea, and what your severest critic won't tell you. I take ample time for my breakfast, and indeed for all meals, chewing each mouthful fifty times. Following breakfast I relax for a short period, during which I read the morning paper by a good light. I always walk the two miles to and from my office.

I let no day pass without outdoor recreation of some kind—skating, skiing, golf, swimming, or tennis, according to the season. My evenings are devoted to mental and social recreation, and especially to keeping up with all the latest discoveries of modern hygienic experts. But under no circumstances do I fail to get nine full hours of sleep.

The Case for Books

Why books, anyway? The answer is simple. Books, as yet, afford the only existing means of constantly and continuously enlarging the individual's range of experience; the only means of giving the individual thorough understanding of any of the great aspects of life; the only means of giving the individual that enduring perspective, broad vision and real knowledge which are necessary for his security, growth and happiness under civilized conditions. Other devices may give the same mental or emotional stimulation or delight. But no other devices can so thoroughly and enduringly fit men's minds together, link men into men.—Jesse Lee Bennett in the Bookman.

Other People's Blessings

By SIDNEY BLAIR

(Copyright.)

"I DO wish we could live in town, Ned," Mrs. Willoughby exclaimed, walking across the porch to look down the winter-bound road. "I'm so tired of the country!"

"Well—I always feel that I can work better out here," he said slowly. "But perhaps a few months in the city would be a good thing. I'd like being out in the streets at dusk—"

"And seeing the crowds, and having luncheon where there was lots of noise, and ever so many people—" she interrupted.

"And coming in touch with men who are doing my kind of work—I wish we could do it!" he went on.

Oddly enough, only a few days later Ned Willoughby came across an advertisement in the town paper. It announced that a young married couple living in a neighboring city wished to spend a few months in the country, and would like to exchange their apartment for that time with someone who lived out of town.

"The very thing!" Marian Willoughby exclaimed. "Do telegraph them, Ned, so that we can get their apartment before someone else does!"

He did telegraph, and a reply came at once. The Sawyers would run down to the Willoughbys the following Sunday, see their home, and make arrangements.

When it seemed possible that she and Ned might go to the city Marian could hardly contain herself.

"Think of it—no more long, lonely evenings with the wind howling around the house!" she exclaimed to her husband. "No more marketing in town, two miles away—but most of the time we're going to go out to meals."

"I guess we'll have to; Sawyer says in his letter that they have just a kitchenette in their apartment," Ned replied. "Better not take too many clothes, Marian—they have only two closets."

"I'm glad of it!" she retorted. "No room for our old things! We'll be dressed up all the time."

The Sawyers and the Willoughbys were delighted with each other; apparently the Sawyers were as eager to come to the country as the Willoughbys were to leave it.

"Think of it, Hugh," Mrs. Sawyer exclaimed, as she went over the Willoughbys' big, old-fashioned house. "Open fireplaces—huge rooms, too—and we can go walking down this beautiful road without a soul anywhere near us. I do love the country in winter!"

Marian laughed.

"I can't understand that!" she said. "It seems to me that nothing could be more perfect than the city right now. Don't forget that you'll need loads of blankets if you use the sleeping porch."

"Oh—we can sleep outdoors Hugh—think of it!" Mrs. Sawyer replied. "And don't you forget," turning to Marian, "that our apartment is an awfully warm one. You'll have to turn off the heat in the bedroom unless you have freezing weather, in order to have it cool enough to sleep."

The two families changed homes the following week. At first Marian was perfectly happy. She liked having only three rooms and a bath to look after, liked not having to bother with a servant, never marketing or thinking of a meal unless she wanted to.

But a month after she had come to the city her feelings were changing. The noise was getting on her nerves. She hated having so few rooms, and such small ones.

"How those Sawyers live in this cubbyhole beats me!" Ned remarked. "And when you think that they pay as much rent for this place as we do for our great big house—"

"With the people upstairs and downstairs and next door living right in their laps," his wife cut in. "Isn't it dreadful? Never any privacy. And the noise. And the—how's your indigestion?"

"Worse," he answered. "It's the food I've been eating. Marian, couldn't we have dinner at home tonight?"

"On that electric stove? A whole dinner? Well, I'll try, dear," she answered, relenting at sight of his face. "But I don't see how Mrs. Sawyer ever manages it."

They went home gladly at the end of the third month. Marian longed for her own home, for the big rooms, and the open fireplaces with flames dancing gaily in them, for the copper kettles in her kitchen and the brass candlesticks on the living room mantel.

Mrs. Sawyer ran to the front gate to meet them.

"Oh, do tell me—how's our little place?" she asked eagerly. "I can't wait to reach it. How do you ever keep warm in this place? I slept on the sleeping porch one night and nearly froze. And it's so quiet here—and always having to remember what you want from the store or go two miles for it—or go without!"

"You're a smart man to work out here, so far away from everybody else who's doing your kind of experiments," Sawyer remarked to Ned. "How do you do it?"

"How do you ever work at your kind of thing in town?" Ned retorted. "I've done nothing but talk to other men—I haven't done any work at all. I'm glad to get home!"

"We'll be glad, too," declared the Sawyers together. "There's no place like it."

And the Willoughbys agreed with them.

Here's Instant Relief From Bunions and Soft Corns

Actually Reduces the Swelling—Soft Corns Dry Right Up and Can Be Picked Off.

Wm. F. Dedrick Says Emerald Oil Must Give Complete Satisfaction or Money Cheerfully Refunded.

Get a two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) today. Every well stocked drug store has this, with the distinct understanding that your money will be cheerfully returned if it does not reduce the inflammation, soreness, and pain much quicker than any remedy you ever used.

Your bunions may be so swollen and inflamed that you think you can't go another step. Your shoes may feel as if they are cutting right into the flesh. You feel sick all over with the pain and torture and pray for quick relief. What's to be done?

Two or three applications of Moone's Emerald Oil and in fifteen minutes all the pain and soreness disappears. A few more applications at regular intervals and the swelling reduces.

And as for Soft Corns a few applications each night at bed time and they just seem to shrivel right up and scale off.

No matter how discouraged you have been with pads, shields, or other applications, if you have not tried Emerald Oil then you have something to learn. Something that will end your foot troubles forever.

It's a wonderful formula—this combination of essential oils with camphor and other antiseptics so marvelous that thousands of bottles are sold annually for reducing varicose or swollen veins.

Wm. F. Dedrick and every good druggist guarantees Moone's Emerald Oil to end your foot troubles or money back.

Her Idea of "Art"

A New York "artistic photographer," whose work adorns the pages of many "art publications, has numerous requests for private engagements. One such came from the wife of a newly rich man, who telephoned for an appointment. "And how much do you charge?" she asked. "One thousand dollars," was the reply. Climbers of Table Mountain Pay Tol

News of a mountain tragedy ring through Capetown like a funeral bel It becomes almost a personal traged to everyone. Table mountain loom into the clouds so close to the cit that every detail of its great roc face can be seen from the main street and that makes the fact of a death o its slopes very close and vivid.

Table mountain has a dark histor From the earliest days climbers hav met disaster, and there is one precipi tous part, known as Skeleton gorg where the bones of a number of long dead men have been found.

The noted white cloth of clouds which settles over Table mountain has been responsible for many fatalities Inexperienced people lose their way and, finding darkness approaching, stumble madly downward toward the city lights. Falls of hundreds of feet await them.

Whenever a person is reported missing parties composed of members of the Mountain club leave their work and set out to search the dangerous ledges and ravines. An appeal for a search party never fails. If the missing person is not found by the week-end, hundreds of people join in the quest.

Table mountain attracts scores of new climbers on every public holiday, and it is then that the most tragedies occur. Often the body of a lonely climber is not found for several weeks, so vast is the area to be searched.—From the Continental Edition of the London Daily Mail.

Fire Destroys Kee Waddin Inn

A large two story stone and frame bungalow on the South Ashokan boulevard was destroyed by fire early Friday evening. The bungalow was erected several years ago by Gerard Van Westrum at what was called Kee Waddin Park just east of the spillway The bungalow was known as Kee Waddin Inn and has not been occupied. The fire was seen from a great distance as columns of black smoke arose over the burning structure which stood on a considerable elevation.

The fire spread to surrounding brush and several acres were burned over before nearby residents could extinguish it Nothing remains of the house but the stone work of the lower floor.

London Has Water Taster

An official water taster is employed by the Metropolitan water board of London, England, to sample and test the water supply used by the 7,000,000 Londoners for daily consumption, says Popular Science Monthly. This official is an expert chemist who has trained his sense of taste for the unique job To this end he abstains from smoking and liquor.

Saw Filers' Expression

"Gumming a saw" means to establish properly the depth of the interval between the sawteeth. This is not a serious problem on hand saws, as the three-cornered file does this, as it does its other work. On circular saws and drag saws, however, if a file is used for gumming, it must be a round file or a flat file with a round edge.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Plenty of capable leaders have appeared; the masses will not follow them. It is the herd that is running away, not the best individuals. The middle-class people have done very well and have honored the world somewhat, but the proletarians have disgraced it. . . . Writers are clamoring for reform for those who have reformed themselves and complimenting those in need of reform.

A man, who says he is elderly, writes: "You once asked the question, 'Are husbands and wives naturally antagonistic, as are foxes and hounds?' . . . I at first considered it a rude question, and began convincing myself of it, with a view of writing a protest. But the more I thought of it the more I became convinced of pursuit, capture and conflict in marriage."

Marriage isn't a solace; it's another problem to work out.

In a town near where I live a man was shot and killed by an assassin unknown. The newspapers were full of it at the time. I visited the town not long after the tragedy and heard the men talk about it. They said the murdered man was a decent fellow, and as certainly a martyr to his family as a good many women were before suffrage. They said he was a hard worker and well behaved in all respects, but that he had a worthless wife and children. The men of the town do not doubt that some of his family killed him and are still looking around in the hope of finding the culprit.

A pastor is an attorney for his church and makes out as good a case as is possible, as attorneys do for clients. His criticism of antagonists is seldom fair.

The main idea, of course, is to be a good and capable man; not to claim such distinction while acting like the devil.

In literature we often hear of "style." That's all there is to literature. As a man has it, or lacks it, he is genius or dullard, but neither of them have new ideas.

You claim certain people are fools The only way to prove your contention is to get along better than those you condemn. If you succeed in doing it, you will prosper well enough; the punishment will go to others.

Frog Farm on Large Scale

One of the largest frog farms in the country is under construction near Denton, Texas Several dams are being built and a low, swampy region, already plentiful with frogs, is being further stocked. The frogs will be raised for Texas and other markets. One of the preliminary operations was the draining of the lakes to get rid of fish, a menace to frogs. Several miles of fence will be built round the lakes to keep out snakes, another enemy of frogs. The several lakes will be used for frogs of different ages.—Indianapolis News.

Firmness and Obstinacy

What is firmness of purpose with some people is mere obstinacy in the other fellow. The former are as apt, however, to misjudge themselves as they are the other fellow. That there are a lot of human mules in this world, experience fully proves.—Grit.

Yes, What?

Clerk—This tint of powder matches your face perfectly, madam.

Lady—Then I don't want it. What's the use of powder if it's the same color as my face?

Dogs That Do Not Bark

Siberian sled-dogs are reputed to be the best in the world, are short-haired and generally a kind of gray—might be called mouse-colored. They seem to be more wolf than dog, and never bark but howl like a wolf.

Considering their short hair, I believe you will find them to average larger than the Alaskan sled-dog, writes Captain Oliver in Adventure Magazine.

Teams generally average about eight dogs and they pull sleds across the tundra in summer as well as winter.

HOW—

MOTHER ANTS USE THEIR OFFSPRING AS NEEDLES.—Certain ants use their babies as needles, and the babies, whose job it is to help build the homes, supply the cotton. These homes are made on a twig in a tree, and consist of a number of leaves sewed together.

Having selected a twig and two leaves, the ants take up their position on one leaf and, catching hold of the other one with their claws, draw the two together. If the leaves are too far apart for one ant to stretch they clamber on one anothers' backs, forming a chain to bridge the gap. Having drawn the leaves together, some of the ants retain their hold while out come others with the babies.

These ant babies are still in chrysalis form, and they secrete a fine silk-like substance which is the "cotton" used. The babies are held in the claws of their parents and the sewing begins. Baby's head is pressed against the edge of a leaf and the "silk" which the mite is spinning sticks to it. The parent ant then passes her live "needle" backwards and forwards across the seam of the two leaves. When the two leaves have been thus "sewn" together other leaves are joined to them until a real nest has been made. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

How Scientist Would Draw Water From Fog

An English university professor is endeavoring to solve the problem of Hongkong's rainfall by converting the heavy fogs which envelop the island into rainwater.

The possibility of precipitating into rain the moisture contained in fogs has been the subject of many theories, but no "positive" experimental results have yet been attained.

Fogs are caused by minute dust particles which collect moisture in various ways. The particles, however, are too light to fall as rain. It has been demonstrated that these particles are charged with positive electricity, while the air in which they float is charged negatively.

If a slight difference in electric pressure could be communicated to one part of the fog cloud, cohesion of the droplets would, theoretically, follow, and the enlarged particles would be heavy enough to fall in the form of rain.

In order to accomplish this, high potentials would have to be "broadcast" into the fog, and it would seem that any rain-making experiments conducted on this principle would involve electrical apparatus of great cost.

How Air Mail Is Guided

The electrical engineers provided five stations with aerial beacons aptly nicknamed "midnight suns of the air mail." Each beacon is a high-intensity arc searchlight, mounted on a 50-foot tower, and it revolves three times a minute. Set at an angle of one degree, the 500,000,000-candle-power beam from each of these land lighthouses sweeps the sky just above the horizon. Pilots have sighted beacons 150 miles away on clear nights. At 100 miles the diameter of its beam is about 2 miles if weather conditions permit it being seen at all. On 34 emergency landing fields along the night airway, large guiding lights have been installed. There are smaller light guides every 3 miles. A continuous light lane 1,900 miles long connects New York and Cheyenne now.

How Copper Got Name

Copper got its fame from the fairest of the goddesses, who chose it as the metal for her mirror, when she rose from the sea, somewhere off the island of Cyprus. There were only two known metals at that time, gold and copper. Gold she rejected, because it cast a shallow tinge on her countenance, while copper brightened the tint of her auburn locks and endowered her cheeks with a blush like that of modest maidens. The cyprium from the Cyprian isle became the cuprum of the Romans and the copper of the English, says Watson Davis, in "The Story of Copper." "Not worth a copper," is the nadir of value.

How to Treat Frostbites

The symptoms of frostbite are loss of sensation in the affected part and a waxy, white appearance which may later turn purple due to congestion.

The treatment consists of rubbing the affected part with snow or cold water until sensation returns and the circulation is restored.

Never bathe the frostbitten surface with warm water or submit it to heat until circulation is restored. Otherwise, mortification is likely to result.

How Carpenters "Bend" Wood

The forest service says that in bending wood the steam process is used. Wood that is used for this purpose is usually hickory and ash. A straight piece of the wood is steamed throughly in live steam, then bent over any kind of shape to suit the purpose and clamped down until it is dried.
